5.3 Questions of which Notice has been Given

ITEM 5.3.1

QUESTION ON NOTICE FROM COUNCILLOR S. DEWING RE: CONTROLLING CYCLIST SPEED ON SHARED PATHS

The following Questions on Notice were received from Councillor S. Dewing and the answers are provided.

QUESTIONS

1. What are the range of possible options for managing cycling speed on shared paths being explored by City of Unley?
2. Is there a legal basis on which speed limits on shared paths can be enforced in City of Unley?

ANSWERS

1. The desired outcome from managing speeds on shared paths is safer interaction between bike riders and pedestrians. It is preferable to achieve this through design of the path rather than physical measures or impediments. Physical measures, including bollards, barriers requiring riders to dismount, or uncomfortable terrain should only be considered as a last resort.

When designing upgrades of shared paths, the primary focus is on providing an appropriate width for the type of users.

This allows for increased separation and reduced conflict between bike riders and pedestrians, as well as different types of bike riders. For example, along the Mike Turtur Bikeway, a 4.0m width (to be achieved as part of the upgrade) allows adequate space for faster commuter bike riders to overtake slower recreational users or walkers.

Separate facilities for bike riders and pedestrians are also an option, however this is generally only appropriate where volumes are very high. Separated paths also require a larger total width compared with a shared path.

Passive measures can also be used at specific points to increase awareness of all users to potential areas of conflict. This includes different path materials or distinctive surface treatments which have been included in the design of the Mike Turtur Bikeway.

Below (left) is an example of a treatment used in Felixstow that indicates to cyclists the changed environment.

In addition, to encourage better user behaviour by all, pavement decals have also been previously used on the Mike Turtur Bikeway and Marino Rocks Greenway, as well as other Council areas. These graphics and key messages help confirm appropriate uses, including messages such as 'slow' or 'give way to pedestrians'.

Examples of pavement treatments and decals used on shared paths in Adelaide

2. Currently, there is no legal basis for the enforcement of speed limits along any shared paths including those located within the City of Unley. This is due to the challenges in legally enforcing a bike rider's speed limit which include:
 - Technological limitations in measuring the speed of a bike rider from a standing position.
 - The required expectation of the bike rider themselves to monitor their specific speed.
 - Few bikes are equipped with a speedometer (or similarly accurate speed measuring instrument).

Discussions with the Department for Infrastructure and Transport (DIT) indicate that their focus on shared paths (from a legal perspective) is on bike rider behaviours through the existing Australian Road Rules (ARR) as outlined below.

When riding on a shared use path, a person bike riding must:

- Keep to the left unless it is impracticable to do so (ARR 250).
- Give way to any person walking on the path (ARR 250).
- Exercise due care by travelling at a safe speed and be prepared to stop if necessary (ARR 250).

- Not cause a traffic hazard by moving into the path of a pedestrian (ARR 253).
- Ring a bell or provide a verbal warning to alert people walking, if necessary to avert danger. This could be just a friendly 'hello' to make sure the person walking is aware (Road Traffic Act 1961 Part 3, Division 9 Provision 99A).

The reinforcement of these ARR are typically undertaken using decals/education messages, as key reminders along the shared path route about expected behaviours.

Notwithstanding the challenges in enforcing the speed limit of a person bike riding, DIT also indicated that they are generally not supportive of pursuing speed limits on shared paths as it is considered that it could have an adverse impact on bike riding participation and may push people riding onto alternative routes on-road, which are less safe.

It is also considered that people bike riding tend to self-regulate their speed on paths based on the conditions. For example, on a crowded path where there are large numbers of pedestrians, an appropriate speed of travel is considerably lower than on an isolated path with no other path users. It is acknowledged that at times people bike riding ride too fast for the conditions. However, it is not considered that setting a speed limit would necessarily change this behaviour.
